Title: Launching into the future with telehealthcare

On 6 August 2008 Doctors Safety Line in conjunction with Tunstall, the world's leading provider of telecare launched the new Centre for Innovation in Home Healthcare, a telehealthcare demonstration and training facility.

Based in Doctors Safety Line's office in South Australia, the Centre for Innovation in Home Healthcare will showcase the latest Tunstall telecare, telehealth and assistive technology in action.

The Centre for Innovation in Home Healthcare showcases the latest technology and provides a hands-on education, training and demonstration facility, allowing visitors to try out the alarms and sensors for themselves.

Brian English, managing director of Doctors Safety Line is proud to be presenting the centre for Innovation in Home Healthcare and believes that the technology housed within is the revolution the Australian health system is waiting for.

"The Centre for Innovation in Home Healthcare is a very important new facility for aged care providers, government and private organisations," Mr English said.

"The benefits from utilising telecare and telehealth are potentially huge and have the ability to deliver significant reductions in operational costs".

Managing director of Tunstall Australasia, Stanley Ng recognises that for more than 50 years Tunstall has understood the benefit of assistive technology and is pleased that the advantages are becoming more and more recognised.

“Telehealthcare is transforming care services for those with long term needs, worldwide. It gives patients and carers greater independence and more control over their lives, as well as vital peace of mind,” Mr Ng said.

“The South Australian government is leading the way in addressing issues of the ageing population, and we are delighted to be working with Doctors Safety Line to show how these solutions deliver preventative, enhanced, community based care.”

Doctors Safety Line and Tunstall look forward to a successful launch of the Centre for Innovations in Home Healthcare and welcome people to contact their office on 08 8354 0155 to arrange a visit to the new centre.
