Press Release

For Immediate Release

National Diabetes Week 12-18 July

Title: Independence with Diabetes

For people living with the more severe symptoms of diabetes, Tunstall Healthcare can help them to maintain their independence and confidence in the home.

Tunstall provides a 24 hour response service that allows people in need to make quick and easy access to a trained response operator who can organise the assistance they require.

This assistance could be a family member or a carer to attend, or in the event of an emergency an ambulance to be called.

Tunstall's new Connect + alarm allows users to contact Tunstall's 24 hour response centre, as well as providing a range of other features for people living with diabetes.

The Tunstall Connect + has a reminder facility that using a voice recording, prompts the user to do certain activities such as test their blood sugar level or take their medication.

The feature requires the user to confirm when the activity is done, notifying the response centre if it is not carried out.

Alarm calls from the Connect + can be connected to Tunstall's 24 hour response centre or directly to a family member or carer.

The Tunstall Connect + can be interfaced with up to 35 plug and play peripheral sensors that monitor activity in the home, such as the user getting up during the night and not returning to bed.

Ideal for people with limited mobility or for those at risk of a diabetes related coma, the Tunstall Connect + can also be connected to the Tunstall fall detector which detects if the wearer falls over and does not get up with 15 seconds.

The Connect + will notify the receiver of the call and identify which sensor has activated the alarm so they can respond accordingly.

With Tunstall telecare solutions and the new Connect +, people living with type one and two diabetes can maintain their independence in the home.
