Title: Independence with Dementia

Living with dementia does not have to mean the loss of independence.

Tunstall offers specialty care products and packages to help people with dementia that are capable of living in their own home, to continue doing so.

The Tunstall property exit sensor is attached to the main entrance of the home and will activate an alarm call to Tunstall's 24 hour response centre if the resident leaves the home at abnormal times of the day or night.

Completely tailored to the individual, the property exit sensor can be set to allow the resident to come and go as they please during the day, but activate an alarm call if they leave the home between set hours, such as 5:00pm and 7:00am.

The property exit sensor can also be set to allow the resident to leave the home for a set time before an alarm is activated. This allows residents to walk any visitors to their car or check the mail without activating their alarm.

If however, they do not return within a pre set time, an alarm call will be activated.

The property exit sensor prevents residents from being locked in their home 'for their safety', providing peace of mind that if they do leave, somebody will be notified.

The property exit sensor will also detect if the door has been left open while the resident is at home, posing a possible threat of intrusion.
